Q2.	CASE STUDY 2: Grand strategy, a country's most complex form of planning toward the fulfillment of a long-term objective. The formulation and implementation of a grand strategy require the identification of a national goal, a thorough assessment of the state's resources, and, ultimately, the marshaling of those resources in a highly organized manner to achieve the goal. The notion of a grand strategy is notoriously elusive, because scholars, politicians, and military leaders tend to define it in considerably different ways. Most people do, however, agree that the formulation and execution of a grand strategy are extremely complex operations, incorporating a wide array of political, economic, military, and even psychological dimensions. A wartime strategy is said to become "grand" when it is concerned not only with winning the war but also with securing a comfortable, lasting peace. A grand strategy provides a national vision for the future and a precise plan for the fulfillment of that vision. Achieving the goals of a grand strategy presupposes more than the successful prosecution of a war or the economic development of a country. It also requires a concerted effort on the part of a significant segment of society. Dramatic events such as the September 11, 2001, attacks in the United States can produce unpredictable changes in a country's political and economic environment, and a solid grand strategy needs to be able to adapt to such developments. When drafting a national strategy, a country's decision makers need to carefully consider a series of historical and psychological factors, such as the country's foreign-policy traditions and its tolerance for different levels of confrontation. In some circumstances, a country will discard a grand strategy and adopt a new one to accommodate new national goals. (a) In which circumstances wartime strategy can be considered as grand strategy. Explain with an example. (b) Discuss the important considerations while drafting a country's National strategy. (c) What is the goal of building a grand strategy of a country? Give an example	15	CO4
